Dr. Hagemann is an Associate Professor of Pathology and Immunology at Washington University in St. Louis. He is a graduate of Princeton University and of Washington University School of Medicine and served as resident in Anatomic Pathology at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania before returning to WashU for fellowships in Surgical and Molecular Genetic Pathology. As a fellow, he participated in the launch of GPS@WUSTL, the first clinical next-generation sequencing assay for pan-cancer mutation profiling to be based in an academic laboratory. He is a member of the College of American Pathologists Molecular Oncology Committee, which administers 21 proficiency testing programs with more than 4,000 total subscriptions. His main interests are in gynecologic pathology, including molecular pathogenesis and classification of endometrial cancer. He has received several teaching awards from medical students at WashU and pathology residents at UPenn. He has authored or co-authored 80 scientific publications. His other major responsibility is serving as the Assistant Dean for Admissions at Washington University School of Medicine.
